Dear Dr. Muliadi,

We're conducting a survey to inform our second report on inclusivity within academia and invite you to take part. Our previous Global Inclusivity Report was launched in 2020.

Much research within academia focuses on the United Nations Sustainable Development Goals and the overall aim to 'leave no-one behind'. The survey explores inclusivity from a research perspective, as well as the challenges and opportunities within the sector itself. We've also included a section on the barriers within Indigenous research, as part of our efforts to promote the voices of Indigenous communities.

The survey will take around 10 minutes to complete. Your answers will remain anonymous unless you provide your email address in the last question to take part in the free prize draw. The information you provide will be treated in strict confidence.

Take the survey

You can keep up to date with the latest developments on the 2022 report in the coming weeks, along with other news from Emerald Publishing on Facebook, Twitter and LinkedIn.

Each completed survey will be entered into a draw to win a £250 donation for the winner's chosen charity.

Thanks for your views and being part of the Emerald community.

Kind regards,

Are you in?

Dear Dr. Muliadi

Our sector makes an incredible difference to the world, but is held back by structural challenges and research evaluation approaches that can limit the impact of research in the real world. We've long championed for change and have introduced initiatives to advance real impact, but significant change requires collective action.

Now more than ever, research and academic institutions, policy makers, funders, publishers and service providers need to join up thinking, break down barriers to change and build shared action plans that are co-ordinated and inclusive.

Are you in?

We are calling upon the community to unite and work together for change. In our co-developed Real Impact Manifesto, we've set out six commitments we believe are important to the research ecosystem and the continued evolution of research impact, from academic metrics to societal benefit.

Read the Manifesto

We're committed to change, but progress can only be made if we act together, so we're asking you to join us by adding your name to the Manifesto.

Add my name

Get involved

Over the course of the year, we'll carry out activities to encourage others to commit and take action. Our plans include launching a dedicated podcast series, sharing blogs and opinion pieces and publicly championing initiatives for change. We'd love your support, ideas and involvement. To keep up to date and how you can get involved, please visit our dedicated landing page and add your name to the Manifesto.

I'd like to get involved

Join the conversation

We've created a dedicated and welcoming space for the research community to unite, share content and ideas and discuss the matters that are important to you to bring about real change. The group is accessible for anyone who has a LinkedIn profile. If you'd like to connect, simply click on the link below and request to join.

Dear Dr. Muliadi,

Congratulations on the publication of your work! Now it's time to share your research with the world. When it comes to getting your work seen, read and used, you can play a crucial role, after all no-one is better placed to explain the results than the author.

Here are some hints and tips

Social media

Share your work on your social media channels to increase visibility. Join in conversations, highlight your research and reach a global network as others comment, share and like your work. Facebook, Twitter, LinkedIn, Instagram and YouTube, are all great ways to make sure your research is part of current conversations.

Self-archiving

Our green open access route allows you to make your research openly available, free from payment and embargo periods.

As soon as your work has been published, you can use the Author Accepted Manuscript (AAM) for a variety of non-commercial scholarly purposes on your personal website, company or institutional repository and social collaboration networks (SCNs) that have signed up to the Voluntary International Association of Scientific, Technical and Medical Publishers (STM) Sharing Principles. As an Emerald author, you have a choice of two licences to deposit your AAM under. Go to the website for more information.

Spread the word

Post information about your published research to relevant contact lists, forums, associations and listservs. If you've got a blog, an online CV or a website, make sure you add a link to your work as well.

Use your email

On average, a person sends more than 40 emails a day – why not include the title of your work in your email signature or use an email banner that includes a link to your research on Emerald Insight?

Conferences

Do you teach or speak at events or conferences? Why not feature a slide at the end of your lectures and presentations. If your research is relevant to the conference theme, post a link to your work with the conference hashtag.

Engage with the media

You may want to contact your organisations media relations department to let them know about your publication, it's a great news story! Write a simple summary about your research, your objectives, your results and the impact of your findings.

Visit our website for more advice on increasing the impact and visibility of your work.
